POWERLANDS

Directed by Ivey Camille Manybeads Tso, Powerlands investigates displacement of Indigenous people and devastation of the environment caused by the same chemical companies that have exploited the land where she was born. On this personal and political journey, she learns from Indigenous activists across three continents.

POST-FILM DISCUSSION WITH DIRECTOR IVEY CAMILLE MANYBEADS TSO

Ivey Camille Manybeads Tso is an award-winning queer Navajo filmmaker. She started making films at the age of 9, through the Native youth media project Outta Your Backpack Media. At the age of 19, Ivey Camille began work on POWERLANDS, her first feature, which has already won several awards, including best feature at American Documentary and Animation Festival (AmDocs).
