

ENVIRONMENTAL JUSTICE

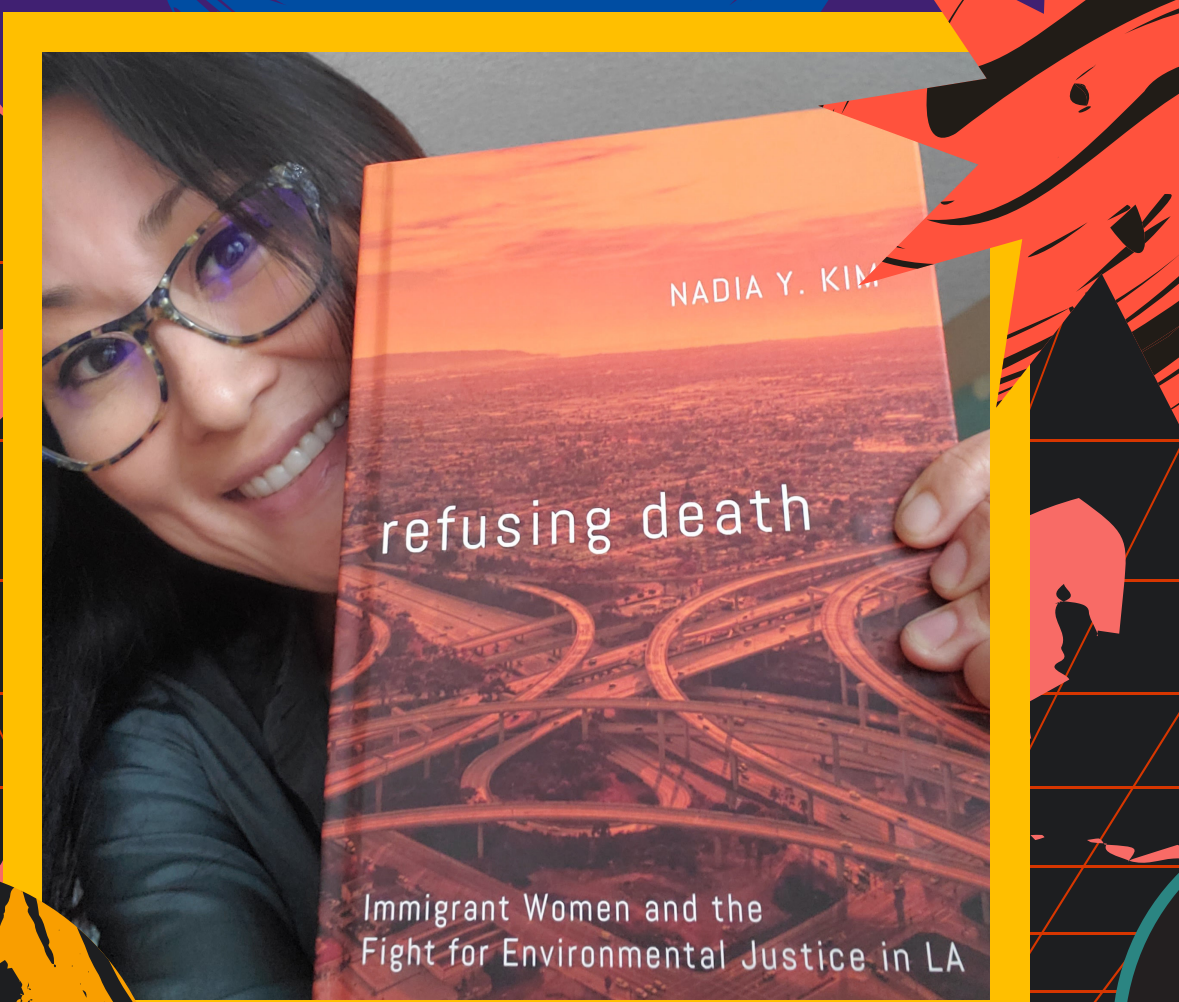

FEELING POLITICS

The Role of Emotions in Environmental Racism Fights

Dr. Nadia Kim

Dr. Kim's book, Refusing Death, examines race, class, gender, and citizenship of marginalized and unauthorized immigrants—especially women and youth—making political inroads by way of grassroots activism. Through ethnographic observation, in-depth interviews, and document analysis of Asian American and Latin@ environmental justice activism in Los Angeles, she finds that these mostly female immigrant activists are redefining notions of politics, community, and citizenship in the face of America's nativist racism and its system of class injustice, defined by pollution and neglected schools, surveillance/deportation, and political marginalization.

Register on Shoreline:
<https://cglink.me/2dD/r1950761>

Nadia Kim is Professor of Asian and Asian American Studies at Loyola Marymount University. Her research focuses on US race and citizenship injustices concerning Korean/Asian Americans and South Koreans, race and nativist racism in Los Angeles, immigrant women activists, environmental racism and classism, and comparative racialization of Latinxs, Asian Americans, and Black Americans.
Co-sponsored by Environmental Justice Alliance

For more information or assistance in accommodating people of varying abilities contact the MultiCultural Center at 805.893.8411

@UCSBMCC

THURSDAY, FEB 16, 2023 6-7:30PM • MCC THEATER