

The MultiCultural Center presents

Join the MultiCultural Center, in collaboration with CPOD and the Chicano/a Studies Department, for a critical lecture and guided discussion featuring Dr. Daina Sanchez, Associate Professor of Chicana and Chicano Studies at UCSB.

ROOTS & ROUTES

REIMAGINING HOME AND BELONGING AMONG INDIGENOUS MIGRANTS

TUES FEB 10 • 5:00-7:30 PM • MCC LOUNGE

Join the MultiCultural Center, in collaboration with CPOD and the Chicano/a Studies Department, for a critical lecture and guided discussion featuring Dr. Daina Sanchez, Associate Professor of Chicana and Chicano Studies at UCSB. This event explores how Indigenous youth craft new worlds of belonging when home exists across multiple territories. Dr. Sanchez will draw from her powerful ethnographic work and lived experiences as a diasporic Solagueña to unpack how displacement, language, and intergenerational memory shape identity and community across the U.S.-Mexico border. The session invites attendees to think of home as a living relationship built through stories and traditions, culminating in a hands-on "Roots & Routes" reflection board to connect participants with their own cultural and communal heritage.

Register at Shoreline:
<https://cglink.me/2dD/r2270363>

Daina (day-nuh) Sanchez is an Associate Professor of Chicana and Chicano Studies at the University of California, Santa Barbara. She received her Ph.D. in Anthropology from the University of California, Irvine. She was previously the Mellon-Sawyer Postdoctoral Research Associate at the Center for Latin American and Caribbean Studies at Brown University and a Ford Foundation Postdoctoral Fellow in the Native American and Indigenous Studies Program at the University of Texas at Austin. Her research agenda focuses on race, migration, and Indigenous youth.

Co-sponsor: Chicano/a Studies Department

For more information or assistance in accommodating people of varying abilities contact the MultiCultural Center at 805.893.8411

   @ucsbmcc